

Dear Prospective Buyers:

My parents bought this house in 1974 when I was a year old. This house has always been home for me. The hill in the backyard is the first hill I rode a sled down. I walked to and from Glenwood School long before there were crossing guards at every corner. I rode my bicycle into the Glenwood section to play with friends after school or hosted three on three football games in the backyard. My friends and I explored the arboretum together, often playing man hunt in the woods.

As an adult, my wife, Emily, and I got the opportunity to make this house our own, gutting, renovating and expanding the footprint the home in 2007. Now there is an open kitchen and family room, two master suites and two kitchen areas. There are six bedrooms and a large, finished basement. My parents lived here for parts of the year with us. We hosted annual parties where we invited literally hundreds of friends. We have had many a baseball team barbecue and kid birthday party here. Our kids experienced sledding for the first time on the same hill that I did. I walked to the train station to commute to the city.

Now that my parents no longer live here with us, we have used the second kitchen area as a playroom, an office, and a space to simply bask in the sun.

With our oldest going off to college, and my parents no longer being with us, now seems like a good time to sell. There are too many memories here for me to even begin to count. I hope that this house can now provide a new family with a home to make their own memories in.
